

Dear Dr. Drageset,

thank you for submitting your article to our journal. Unfortunately, we cannot publish it for a number of reasons. The article seems to be too speculative and empirically unsubstantiated to count as regular research article. At the same time, it is clearly not meant as an opinion piece either. It is also rather short but still very comprehensive, and it tries to give an overview over a range of ideas and deals with several "big issues" in a couple of paragraphs (free will, attention, string theory...).

I am sorry to have no better news for you. I wish you good luck in finding a different publication outlet that better fits your work.

Thank you, and best wishes

Robert Prentner
